

Guide to the 2005 Work Plan for the Sudan

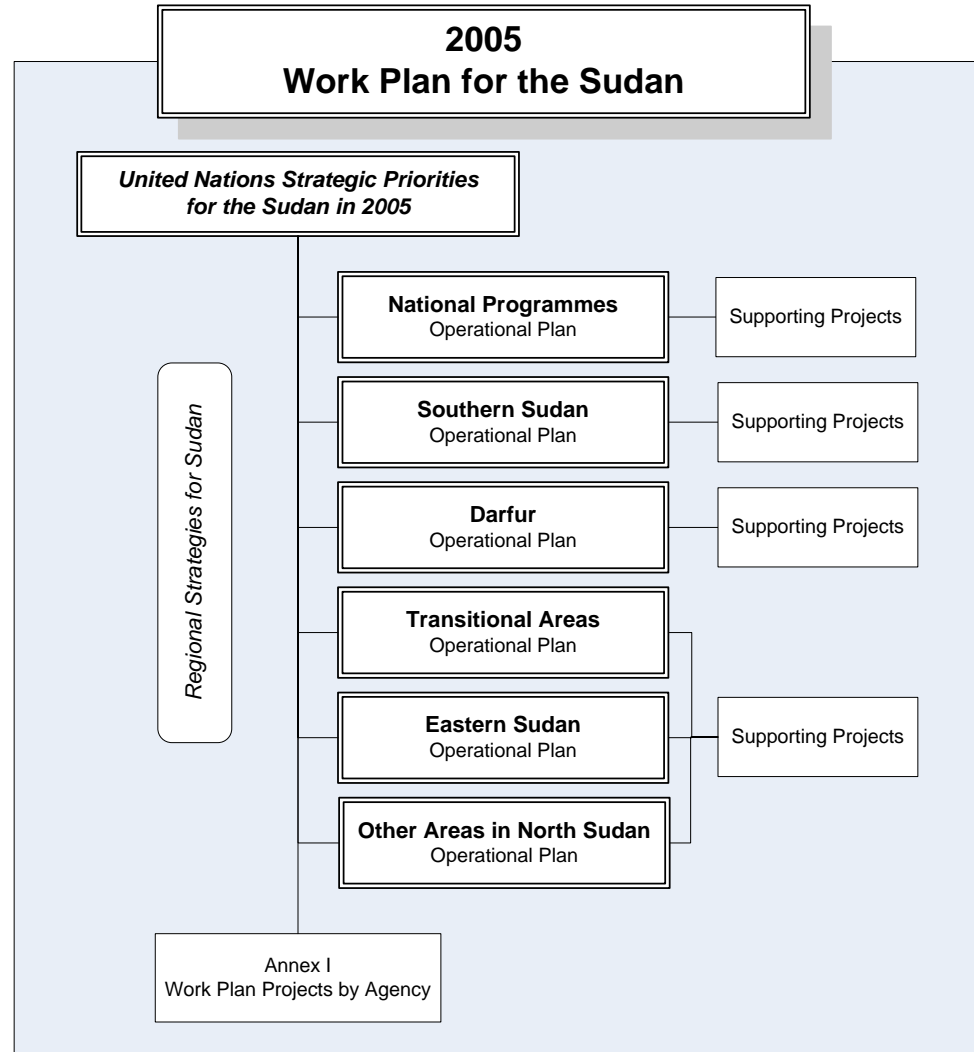

Structure of the 2005 Work Plan for the Sudan

The 2005 Work Plan for the Sudan is an integrated relief, recovery and development action plan for 2005. It outlines what the United Nations believes are the most urgent needs that can and must be addressed by the United Nations system and its partners within a one-year timeframe.

The United Nations, in collaboration with its partners, jointly developed the five strategic priorities for 2005. These are to be implemented through regional operational plans, divided by sectors. The operational plans provide clearly laid out objectives, baseline information (where available), activities and indicators for humanitarian action, recovery and development. Based on these operational plans, supporting projects have been developed. Each project is linked to one or more operational objectives and to the strategic priorities for 2005. The list of projects, with their links to the strategic priorities, make up the financial requirements of the United Nations system and many partners, and as such, constitutes the United Nations common appeal for funds for Sudan for 2005.

Operational plans are divided into sectors. Each sector plan is integrated to include, as appropriate, humanitarian action, recovery and development objectives and activities. An effort has been made to clearly identify and categorise "humanitarian action," "recovery" and "development" objectives and activities. While recognising that the boundaries between, for example, humanitarian and recovery can be difficult to define, and are often contingent upon the context in which an activity is taking place, the categories nevertheless present a useful guide to partners.

A 2005 Work Plan Logical Framework Database has been developed to supplement the 2005 Work Plan for the Sudan document. Database reports are available upon request from the Office of the UN RC/HC (through sudanworkplan@un.org) or online at www.unsudanig.org. The database links every project in the work plan to one or more sector objectives, and each objective to one of the five strategic priorities, thereby creating a clear logical framework for the 2005 programme. The database will facilitate monitoring of indicators and will enable greater accountability and more robust reporting on the part of the United Nations to both internal and external stakeholders.

United Nations Strategic Priorities for the Sudan in 2005

1. Promote and support the protection and stabilisation of populations in areas of conflict and natural disasters, through the provision of humanitarian assistance;
2. Support the search for, and implementation of, a comprehensive peace agreement for Sudan, including through the promotion of reconciliation, confidence building and support for good governance;
3. Increase the access of host communities and deprived populations to basic services and sustainable livelihood opportunities; to reduce dependency on humanitarian aid and the likelihood of conflict over resources;
4. Support the promotion and protection of human rights and the rule of law;
5. Support the return and reintegration of refugees and the displaced, including by providing protection along routes of return and supporting livelihood recovery.

Region Codes

Region codes indicate the regions within Sudan targeted by project activities. Region codes can appear in any combination except for National (N) which per default encompasses all regions.

Projects covering several regions will appear in the project summary table for each of these regions with the budget for the specific region indicated. In cases where a regional breakdown of project budgets is not available, the project will appear a) under the main target region (e.g. southern Sudan) with the full budget amount as Requested Funds, and b) in additional region(s) without indication of requirements but with reference to where this can be found.
